The Daily Quote

"President Trump's speech Tuesday to a joint session of Congress comes as fellow Republicans are returning to Washington after raucous town hall meetings where they've faced crowds angered by the lack of a coherent plan to replace the Affordable Care Act after its promised repeal... Republican lawmakers are now hustling to assemble health-care legislation that addresses dueling concerns within the party. On one hand, they are eager to fulfill seven years of promises to repeal the Affordable Care Act and lessen the federal government's role in health care. On the other hand, many are wary of roiling insurance markets and rolling back the ACA's expansion of Medicaid, a program that covers 76 million Americans. 'I think there are some very conservative Republicans in the House who are going to say, just get rid of the whole thing,' Ohio Gov. John Kasich (R) said Sunday on CBS's 'Face the Nation.' 'That's not acceptable when you have 20 million people or 700,000 people in my state, because where do the mentally ill go, where do the drug addicts go?'"
