The Daily Quote

"A handful of House conservatives on Monday evening criticized GOP leadership's newly released Obamacare replacement bill, foreshadowing trouble for the repeal effort even after leaders tried to assuage the far-right... Freedom Caucus member Dave Brat (R-Va.) piled on, telling POLITICO he'd vote against it in its current form because... 'Now [they] are saying we're going to do repeal and replace but the bill does nothing of the sort,' he said. '[Speaker] Paul Ryan [R-WI] has always said the entire rationale for this bill is to bend the cost curve down, and so far I have seen no evidence that this bill will bring the cost curve down...' House GOP leadership, meanwhile, is gearing up for a major effort to whip support for the bill... It doesn't appear to be enough though... House Republican leaders expect some conservatives and moderates to oppose the measure on the floor. But they can only afford to lose 21 votes."
