The Daily Quote

"Voters appear to favor raising some taxes as part of a deal to raise the debt ceiling, two new polls show. With the U.S. expected to go into default if the debt ceiling isn't raised soon, Quinnipiac University's Polling Institute released a survey Thursday showing voters, 67% to 25%, prefer a deficit-reduction deal that includes both spending cuts and higher taxes on the wealthy and corporations rather than only cuts spending… A Gallup poll released Wednesday concluded that Americans want the majority of deficit reduction to come through spending cuts, but most favor some combination of reduced expenditures coupled with higher revenues."
